CHARITIES AND CORRECTION

The First Conference in Vermont To Be Held in Burlington, Jan. 11 and 12.

Vermont is the last of the eastern states to take steps to organize a State Conference of Charities and Correction.

The need of conference and co-operation has been strongly felt by many engaged in work for the dependent, the handicapped and the deficient. At a preliminary conference it was decided to call a meeting for the purpose of organizing such a conference, and committees were appointed to carry that purpose into effect.

The members of these committees have arranged to hold the first State Conference in Burlington, Jan. 11 and 12. Able speakers have been secured and it is believed that the conference will be one of great interest and usefulness.

The committees unite in inviting all persons engaged in charitable or correctional work and all persons interested in such work to attend and participate in the conference. They urge the need of a large attendance so that the success of the endeavor may be assured.

Any further information desired can be secured by addressing W. J. Van Patten, Burlington.

MONROE

Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Emery Observe Golden Wedding—Personals.

(Mabel Frazier, Correspondent.)
On January 1, 1866 Charles G. Emery, who had given four of the best years of his life to the service of his country, serving first under Gen. B. F. Butler for three years in the New Hampshire and re-enlisting at New Orleans, and then serving under Gen. Philip Sheridan to the close of the war, was married at Littleton, N. H., to Martha Bedell, and for the last 40 years they have been residents of this town.

Almost 200 of their neighbors and friends gathered at the Grange hall on Saturday evening last to celebrate their golden wedding, bringing with them $87 of glittering gold coin that was presented to them by their pastor, Rev. D. E. Burns, in his inimitable manner.

Eight sturdy sons and daughters have blessed their union, all of whom are now living, and all of whom with their families, with the exception of one daughter who is in New Brunswick for the winter with her invalid husband, were present to assist in celebrating the 50th anniversary of the wedding day of their father and mother.

Think of it, 50 years of married life with eight children and not a vacant chair by reason of decease of any member of that household. Mr. and Mrs. Emery both stand erect notwithstanding the weight of more than 70 years, with the prospect of many more years of usefulness.

The mid-night hour drew near, the guests took their departure, wishing them many happy returns of their wedding anniversary. The following are the names of their children: Willis Emery of Concord, Mrs. William Brown of Monroe, Mr. Vernon L. James of East Burke, Wesley C. Emery of Monroe, Charles G. RYEGATE

Snow Shoe Tramp To The Top of Blue Mountain—Locals.

(Mrs. C. A. McKirahan, Correspondent.)
Nature outtraveled herself in the effect produced by the late snow storm. To the nature lover the scenes along the public highways were marvelously beautiful. The overhanging boughs covered with ice and snow made a winter panorama rarely seen. Many camera artists caught the views in many of the most picturesque places. The Blue Mountain club could not let such a golden opportunity go by.

On Friday a snow shoe party started from the village about two o'clock going by train to George Cochran's at the base of Blue Mountain.

There they made the trip to the summit on snow shoes. From the top of the tower a fine view of all the surrounding mountains was obtained.

The clearness of the air, the whiteness of the snow dotted here and there with dark patches of woodland, the distinct outlines of the distant mountains, the gorgeous sunset, all combined to leave an impression upon the company rarely enjoyed by the summer tourists. One of the party surprised the party by producing warm maple sugar carried in a thermos bottle and the dish of snow prepared by the women used to spread the sweet upon pointed sticks used as forks and all enjoyed the luxury. All returned in the dusk of the evening glad they had braved the elements and enjoyed the climb and maple banquet.

Rev. and Mrs. John Lytle of South Ryegate, Mrs. J. A. McKirahan, and Edwin were guests of Rev. and Mrs. L. Q. Simpson on Friday.

The community singing held in the vestry of the United Presbyterian church on Friday evening was fairly well attended. The contest in speaking resulted in the prize being awarded little Margaret Lackey of East Ryegate.

Dorothy Nelson gave a party on Saturday night in honor of her friend, Miss Eunice McGilvray of St. Johnsbury.

The annual meeting and turkey dinner held in the vestry of the United Presbyterian church on Tuesday last week proved to be a most enjoyable and successful meeting.

The dinner was of the best, the sociability pleasant, the business satisfactorily adjusted, a debt of $100 provided for and the trustees, Charles Gibson, James Nelson and W. D. White received many compliments for their cleverness in attending to their official duties.

Edwin McKirahan gave a party to the Blue Mountain club on Thursday evening. There were 15 present. The first part of the evening was spent sitting about the open fire place, camp fire fashion, enjoying repartee and charades, college songs and a general good time filled in the remainder of the evening, followed by refreshments of sugar on snow, doughnuts, olives, pickles and coffee. After the company had donned their wraps snow shoes and skis and were leaving the house Walter Nelson made a flash picture of the crowd.

A "WORN-OUT" FARM New York Farm in Poor Condition Was Made to Pay Large Profit By Good Management.

An example of what intelligent farm management may accomplish on a so-called "worn-out" New York hill farm, is offered in the case of a place surveyed in Broome County, N. Y., which was bought for $16.32 per acre, and in two years was made to pay over 32 per cent on the investment. It is given in the Weekly News Letter of the Department of Agriculture.

This place was bought by a farmer who was already farming at a profit in the valley below. It consisted of 95 acres of gently rolling land. The land had been cropped with hay and corn for years, and little or no manure or other fertilizing material had been applied. Consequently the soil was in very poor physical condition. There was a good farm house on the farm, and a rather poor barn.

A tenant was engaged to live in the house and do the work on the farm under the owner's direction. Under the terms of the agreement the owner furnished all the lime and clover seed and half of the other seeds and of the fertilizer. He also supplied a potato planter and digger. The tenant furnished the rest of the machinery, his own teams, and all of the labor. In return he was to receive one-half of the oats, buckwheat, and potatoes raised, and the income from four cows which he was permitted to keep. It was provided, however, that he was to feed all the hay and roughage on the farm and to return the manure, straw, etc., to the land. He was also to do all the improvement work for which he had time, such as picking up stones and cutting hedgerows.

The new owner took possession on April 1. The cropping system adopted for the first season was necessarily a makeshift, owing to the lack of time for putting a definite plan for improvement into execution.

Four acres of potatoes were planted. The seed happened to be poor, and, only 400 pounds of commercial fertilizer being used, the yield was only 90 bushels per acre. Five acres of buckwheat yielded 116 bushels. Lime and acid phosphate were applied to one 8-acre tract and from this field 300 bushels of oats were harvested.

At the same time an excellent stand of clover was obtained in the same field. Ten head of young cattle were pastured on a slope where the land was rough and not available for tillage. An old meadow was mowed, yielding about a ton of rather poor hay per acre.

During the summer permanent repairs were made at a cost of about $400. At the end of the year the owner's gross receipts amounted to $240.30, of which $157.50 represented his income from his investment.

The next year about 9 acres of sod land were plowed and put into potatoes. The tenant left some of the seed potatoes exposed for several days, and as a result, a very uneven stand was secured. Three plantings were made. The first, from freshly cut seed, gave an even stand and yielded 150 bushels to the acre. The next and largest planting made a very poor stand, yielding only 50 bushels to the acre, while the last was good and yielded 150 bushels to the acre.

From the whole field 816 bushels were dug, an average of about 90 bushels per acre. These were worth a dollar a bushel at the farm, however, which in part made up for the low yield.

The clover sown the previous year made a good showing. Over 4 tons of hay were taken from a 2-acre piece, while the remainder of the new seeding cut about a ton per acre. Eight acres of oats, in which the usual seeding of timothy was made, yielded 186 bushels of grain. Lime and acid phosphate had been put on this field.

Buckwheat yielded 120 bushels of grain on 5 1/2 acres. Thirteen head of young stock were summered on this pasture. An old orchard of about 2 acres, which the owner had reserved, was renovated and sprayed at a cost of $40.

At the end of the second year, although a number of fairly expensive improvements had been made, including the repair of the barn at a cost of $100, the owner's share of the gross receipts of the enterprise amounted to $906. This included $360 received for apples from the orchard which he had reserved for his own use. His net income was $84.60, or 32.5 per cent on his investment.

In this case the owner's labor as superintendent is negligible, since he was running his home farm and devoting only spare time to the hill farm in question. However, even if the owner were allowed $500 for his superintendence and $20 for the use of the few tools which he contributed, the investment would still show a dividend of 9 per cent. At the same time the tenant made a comfortable living. No strict record was kept of his returns, but his share of the field crops for the second year was worth about $500, while the four cows contributed materially to the family living.

Old Friends in Living Pictures.

The many friends of ex-Gov. S. E. Pingree of Hartford and Capt. Horace French of Lebanon are interested to know that they are part of a photographic reproduction of the famous painting "The Spirit of '76" made by Miss Margery Watson of Hartford.

Gov. Pingree and Capt. French are regular visitors here at the reunions of the 3rd Vermont regiment. With them in the picture is little Robert Stevens, the 11-year-old son of Roland E. Stevens, St. J. A. 1891. Gov. Pingree, who is now in his 84th year, is seen playing the fife and Capt. French, now 79, is playing the drum. Gov. Pingree wears a Continental army suit while Capt. French is dressed as a colonial yeoman minus the coat and cravat.

FRESH AIR FOR POULTRY

Thorough Ventilation of Houses Desirable, Both Day and Night, Even in the Coldest Weather.

There has been in recent years a marked tendency in poultry-house construction toward securing more fresh air, both day and night, by replacing the glass windows with cloth or muslin or by making the front either of muslin or entirely open, says The Weekly News Letter of the Department of Agriculture. Tight houses with double walls are almost relics of the past, even in the most northern parts of the United States. Fresh air is one of the prime essentials in poultry houses, and warmth secured by keeping the house shut up tightly is not as desirable as a lower temperature and some ventilation. A house which gives satisfaction in Maine will also give good results in Texas or California, but it is preferable to build more open and consequently less expensive houses in the South than in the North.

The back and sides of the poultry house should be absolutely tight in order to prevent drafts which may cause colds in the flock. This leaves only the front of the house of muslin construction or entirely open. An opening which can be closed by a shutter may be used to advantage in the rear wall of a poultry house in the South, or in growing houses in all parts of this country, but this should be constructed so that there will be no draft in cold weather. The front of the house should be so high that the windows or openings will allow the sun to shine well back into the interior during the winter. Burlap, unbleached muslin, or light-weight duck cloth may be used for curtain in the front. This cloth should be thin enough to allow a slow circulation of air without a draft. This is impossible if too heavy a grade of duck cloth is used or if the cloth is oiled or painted.

For southern conditions, houses with the fronts entirely open are well adapted, and this type is used with success in all sections of the United States. They require less attention than houses where the ventilation is controlled by the use of curtains or windows, but in the northern half of the United States the majority of poultry keepers prefer to have part or all of the front of their poultry houses under control, in order to keep the snow, rain and wind from beating into the house and to protect the poultry during the colder weather. If the curtain is not attended to, however, curtain-front houses may be less satisfactory than the open-front type even in northern latitudes.

A large amount of glass in the front of the house makes it warm during the day but cold at night, as glass radiates heat very rapidly. Some glass, however, is helpful in providing light when the curtains are closed. Some ventilation should be given in a poultry house even on the coldest night. It is usually best secured by leaving a small window open or having muslin curtains in the front of the house. If the house is shut up tightly without any muslin curtains in the front there is a tendency for moisture to collect in the house and condense on the rafters and other woodwork on frosty mornings. It is not necessary to close the muslin curtains in the front of the house except in very cold weather. Hens are protected by nature with warm feathers and a high body temperature so that they are better able to withstand dry, cold air than warmer air which is damp.

HE COULD HARDLY GO

"About two years ago I got down on my back until I hardly could go," writes Simon J. Quetta, Flat River, Mo. "I got a box of Foley Kidney Pills and they straightened me right up." Common symptoms of kidney trouble are backache, headache, rheumatic pains, soreness and stiffness, puffiness under eyes, blurred vision, sleep disturbing bladder troubles, and a languid, tired feeling. Foley Kidney Pills eliminate the poisonous waste matter that causes these symptoms. C. C. BINGHAM.
